Babyette Guidelines For Parents

LET'S GO BY A KITE

SPRING IS HERE AT LAST...

Kites are a wonderful way to enjoy the outdoors and have fun with family and friends. Here are some guidelines to help you and your children have a safe and enjoyable kite-flying experience.

1. Choose the right kite: Make sure to choose a kite that is appropriate for your child's age and skill level. Look for a kite that is easy to control and has a weight that is suitable for the wind conditions.

2. Pick the right location: Choose an open space with few obstacles, such as trees or power lines, to avoid accidents. Make sure the area is free from power lines or other hazards.

3. Use the right string: Use a strong, manageable kite string that is appropriate for the wind conditions. Avoid using string that is too thick or too thin, as it may not hold up well in the wind.

4. Keep an eye on the kite: Always keep an eye on the kite, even when it is flying high in the air. Never let the kite get too far away, as it can easily get lost in the wind.

5. Be prepared for emergencies: In case of an emergency, make sure you have a plan in place to safely retrieve the kite. This may include using a kite retrieval pole or having someone else help you.

Remember, kite flying can be a fun and safe activity if you follow these guidelines. Enjoy the outdoors and have fun with your family and friends.

Animal ABC

PRIMITIVE ROYALTY OR MILLER'S TANTRUM and THROPY

TOM AND LUCY were sitting in the kitchen, eating lunch and talking about the new puppy they had just adopted from their local animal shelter. Tom had been a huge fan of dogs for as long as he could remember, and he was excited to finally have his own furry companion.

"I can't wait to bring her home," Tom said, beaming. "I know she'll be a great addition to our family." Lucy nodded in agreement, smiling at her husband. "I agree," she said, "she's going to be a great friend to us both."

As they finished their meal, the news came over the radio that there was a tornado warning in their area. "We should probably get out of here," Lucy said, looking out the window at the dark clouds gathering in the sky.

"Good point," Tom replied, standing up. "Let's pack up and head to the shelter for a while."

The couple quickly gathered their bags and headed out the door. As they drove through the streets, they could hear the wind picking up and felt the rain begin to fall.

"This is really starting to feel real," Tom said, glancing at the sky. "I'm glad we got out of here when we did."

The couple arrived at the animal shelter just as the tornado hit. They watched in horror as the building shook and the windows rattled, and they knew that they had made the right decision to leave.

After the storm had passed, the couple returned to their home and assessed the damage. They were relieved to find that their home was still standing, but they knew that they would need to clean up and repair some of the damage from the tornado.

"That was a scary experience," Lucy said, shivering as she sat on the couch with her husband. "But I'm glad we're okay."

"Me too," Tom replied, leaning over to give his wife a hug. "And now I know how to move quickly in case of an emergency."

As they settled in for the evening, the couple were grateful to have survived the tornado and to have each other to lean on. They knew that they would face many challenges in the future, but they were determined to face them together, as a family.
